REPORT

Pranali Tarakant Thakur, a second-year volunteer of the National Service Scheme (NSS) from our college, actively participated in the seven-day university-level camp held at Dapoli Urban Bank Senior Science College, Dapoli. The camp took place from January 12, 2019, to January 18, 2019. This report aims to highlight Pranali's engagement and contributions during the camp.

Pranali Tarakant Thakur demonstrated exemplary enthusiasm, dedication, and leadership qualities throughout her participation in the university-level camp at Dapoli. Her active involvement in various activities contributed significantly to the Exhibits strong leadership skills and collaborates effectively with her fellow volunteers during group activities and projects. She demonstrated the ability to motivate and inspire others, thereby fostering a sense of unity and camaraderie within the group.

She actively participated in community service projects organized as part of the camp, including cleanliness drives, awareness campaigns, and volunteer work at local institutions. Her dedication to serving the community and making a positive impact was evident in her active involvement in these initiatives.

She attended skill enhancement workshops conducted during the camp, focusing on topics such as communication skills, leadership development, and project management. She actively participated in discussions and practical exercises, demonstrating a willingness to learn and grow.

Participation in such camps enhances her personal growth and contributes positively to the larger goal of societal development and youth empowerment.
